FAY KING'S FAILURE AS DAME WITH POISE

Just Can't Acquire Parade Rest Attitude Haughty Sisters Admire.

By FAY KING.

How do they get that way, these dames who can stand like a weedy willow, while everything seems to roll off their snobbishness like rain off a hogback roof? A waiter could drop a tray full of soup plates six inches from the hem of their spangled dresses and it wouldn't mean any more in their lives than snow on the Andes.

Ge, how I envy 'em! I've pinned pictures of their poise upon a wall and tried to fall into that fascinating parade rest they seem to be born with, but I get all bent up like a pretzel, and ache for hours afterward.

I practice looking nonchalant or whatever you call that enameled coating of absolute absence from anything annoying, and the best I get is an idiotic expression around these eyes, and the attitude of an amateur contortionist who has started something she can't finish.

EVEN DICTIONARY FAILS.

I've practiced walking with a book on my head like I read one graceful dame did, and even picked out a heavy subject, not light fiction, wishing to do the thing up right, but even Webster's unabridged didn't get me anything in the way of sympathy steps. I got a bump on the top of my head and turned my ankle.

Once I hobbled like a lame dog and had to shift one dog in front of the other with the toes pointing outward, and that time I fell forward and almost spoiled my nose worse than I is.

I'd rather be pigeon-toed like I am than try that stunt again.

I was walking down the street one day when I came to a show window filled up with these war women that seem to look so pretty with one shoulder hoisted up under their left ear and their fingers laid out in various graceful formations. I thought it would be a good time to practice, and was so interested I frightened me to suddenly discover a couple cops and a crowd edging in toward me like they wanted to nab me off before I got more desperate, and then I blushed a polka-dot red and ducked into the store!

Hurry is the pill that kills poise. So I made up my mind never to rush to the telephone, but walk gracefully with measured tread and regal grace.

NEEDS HIRED HELP.

Everytime I got to the phone the party had hung up.

It was easy to be seen that I couldn't accomplish this without engaging a maid to get to the phone ahead of me and hold 'em on the wire, but I can afford a personal maid about as much as a tramp can a private car.

I always envy these languid dames that can fall back on a divan of cushions or the plush seat of a Pullman coach and in little or no time have ten guys helping 'em off with a change purse and a box of bonbons.

It's always the other way round with me. I have to carry my two small wardrobe trunks and usual help some other dame off with her twins and birdcages.

One day I made up my mind never to move faster than a snail and never talk above a whisper.

I showed up at the office like that any everybody from the boss to the office boy thought I was sick, not stylish. Instead of anybody running up to me with a bunch of orchids, they all paged a bottle of smelling salts and wanted to give me a day off.

Whenever I try to act like a perfect lady everybody thinks I'm mad!

PLANETS' HEAT GAUGED BY SCIENCE

Mars Comfortable During Day at Equator, But Gets Cold at Night.

BOSTON, Dec. 29.—The "Palm Beach" of Mars is at the equator where Martians enjoy balmy temperatures of from 68 to 77 during the day. At night they pile on the blankets, for it gets much colder.

Jupiter is a cold planet, on the other hand, where temperatures hover around 130 below zero.

Saturn is some 36 degrees warmer than Jupiter.

Venus is much warmer than the earth.

These temperatures have been established at the Lowell observatory in Arizona by instruments so delicate that they would detect the heat of a tallow candle at the distance of many miles.

The astonishing results obtained by these instruments were described today by Prof. Donald N. Menzel, of Princeton University at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, in Cambridge.

The chief instrument is a thermocouple, which is essentially two substances, both electrical conductors, joined together and attached to a highly sensitive device for measuring electrical current. A very slight increase in temperature is enough to set up an electrical current at the point of contact between the substances, which is measured and compared with other data.

The heat from the planet is focused on the instrument by means of a telescope, as heat rays are magnified in the same way as light waves.

An enormous number of corrections must be made in the figures at first obtained and computation of astonishing intricacy must be elicited.

The results show that the two planets, Jupiter and Saturn, have some internal source of energy of their own. If they were warmed only by the heat of the sun, they would be 256 below and 260 below respectively.

RHODES WOULD PURCHASE GOVERNMENT FUEL YARD

Under an amendment added to the Interior Department appropriation bill in the House yesterday, the Secretary of the Interior is empowered to purchase land now occupied by the Government fuel yard. The amendment, which was offered by Congressman Rhodes of Missouri, also provides for the establishment of a garage on the site for the use of the department.

The House approved, in the same bill, appropriations totaling $1,655,000 for institutions in the District. For Freedman's Hospital, $172,800 was appropriated; Howard University, $232,000; Columbia Hospital for the Deaf, $104,000; and for St. Elizabeth's Hospital, $1,146,000.

HEATLESS CARS BRING WARM PROTEST

Citizens on Line to Laurel Complain and Agitate For Bus Line.

BRENTWOOD, Md., Dec. 30.—The town council will shortly purchase a tractor for use on the town roads of Brentwood, it was learned yesterday through Councilman J. H. Baker-smith, of the Third ward. When the tractor is received work will be started at once.

Citizens living along the line from Washington to Laurel are aroused over the treatment that they are receiving at the hands of the City and Suburban Railway Company. Citizens who use the trolley car say that the company compels them to use cars in the morning that have no heat. They say they would welcome a bus line to relieve the congestion on the street cars.

T. F. Vass and Horace Spence, officials of the United States Veterans' Bureau, in discussing the situation today, said: "It must be admitted that the running time on the line is very good. In fact, it is much better in the morning and evening rush periods than in the city proper. But the fact remains that the company insists on operating cold cars in the morning. The other car companies run heated cars, but the company running into Maryland does not seem to care whether the patrons are warm or not."

It is expected that the citizens will make a concerted appeal to the officials of the Washington Railway and Electric Company, which operates the City and Suburban line, to see if they cannot have heat in the cars. They will also protest against the company continuing to use old cars that should be condemned.

John Hayes, who was one of the several Mt. Rainierites to be in the incident several days ago at Seventeenth and Rhode, is recovering from his shake-up. No one was seriously hurt in the accident. Hayes said that after the first car hit the paving car it came to a stop and a third car then struck the second car that had come to a stop. The fog was given as a reason for the smash-up.

EASTERN SHORE WILL RETAIN STEAMER

Salisbury Chamber of Commerce Assured of Service For Year More.

SALISBURY, Md., Dec. 30.—The Salisbury-Wicomico chamber of commerce has been assured by officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company that the Eastern Shore-Northern Neck steamer service will be continued for the next twelve months. At the expiration of that time the future existence of the route, which touches the Eastern Shore at Crisfield, will be determined by the cooperation it receives from the ship-owners of each section.

Announcement was made about the middle of November that the transportation company faced a loss of $10,000 in operating expenses sustained during the last seven months of service. An apparent lack of interest in the communities served by the line was charged, and a possibility of its discontinuance appeared.

The chambers of commerce of Crisfield and Salisbury, together with representative citizens of Northern Neck immediately called a meeting aboard the Potomac at Crisfield to discuss the problem of how the public interest could best be aroused by showing the economic value of use of the boat service. It was explained that arrangements were being made on the Virginia side for the formation of a "Produce Association" with a compensated manager, whose duties it would be to study the markets, interest the buyers and perfect a selling organization. That tomato growers were organizing to ship carload lots next year, and that thousands of bushels would be grown.

It was decided to send a committee from the Northern Neck to visit the large markets of the North and East and study methods by which produce should be shipped, connections made with reliable commission houses in the various centers, thereby having the information necessary for the intelligent shipment of products.

An investigation of the results that had been obtained from the carrying out of the program decided upon at the meeting was instrumental in assuring the railroad officials, who made a visit to the section last week, accompanied by Charles M. Freeman, secretary of the local chamber, and William F. Allen, of the Allen Nurseries, this city, that the patronage from the Northern Neck would justify its continuance for another year.

JURY INDICTS IN ASYLUM ROBBERY

Elias Carpenter Charged With Holding Up St. Elizabeth's Employees.

Robbery is charged in an indictment returned today by the grand jury against Elias Carpenter, Ellsworth W. Jones, of 1432 V street northwest, employed at St. Elizabeth's, was sitting on a bench in the grounds of the institution December 2 last with Miss Maud V. Mundy, also an employee of the hospital, when the accused walked up to them, according to the police, stuck his gun into Jones side, telling him to stand up. Jones did as ordered while Carpenter went through his pockets taking out his money. He then took Miss Mundy's pocketbook, and told them not to make an outcry and ran away.

William Meline is charged with assault with intent to kill in connection with shooting November 24 last Frank M. Williams, of 921 Fifteenth street northwest. Williams, according to the police, was separated from his wife who lived at 113 Second street northwest. Meline and his wife were visiting Mrs. Williams at her flat on the night in question, and Williams walking past the house at midnight saw lights in her rooms. He went to his wife's apartment where he found Meline and his wife. Mrs. Williams asked her husband why he did not mix with her friends, whereupon he replied, according to the police, that he could not associate with people who had brought her down to such a position. Meline resented the remark and shot Williams five times.

Arthur Carter, charged with the death, July 31 last, of Eugene Rupertus, is alleged to have run into the latter with his automobile.
